Williams Scotsman Appoints Michele Cunningham
Vice President Marketing and Business Development
Extends Company's Execution of Growth Strategy for North America and Europe

Baltimore, Maryland – February 1, 2005 – Williams Scotsman today announces the appointment of Michele Cunningham as Vice President Marketing and Business Development. In this role, Cunningham will oversee all of Williams Scotsman's global marketing operations, including strategic planning, mergers and acquisitions, marketing communications and lead qualification management, product management, media relations, alliances and partnerships, government sales development, and e-business initiatives.

“Michele brings a broad business background and strong strategic leadership capabilities, and will be an excellent complement to the Senior Team at Williams Scotsman”, said Bill LeBuhn, Senior Vice President and Chief Administrative Officer for Williams Scotsman. “Michele's addition to the organization represents our continuing investment in the people and processes necessary to meet our ambitious growth objectives in U.S. markets, as well as international expansion.”

“I am pleased to be joining Williams Scotsman, especially at this point in their growth cycle,” said Cunningham. “The company's commitment to long-term customer relationship and track record of expanding their offerings to meet changes in the marketplace has impressed me. Williams Scotsman has built a truly world-class culture and reputation. It is exciting to be able to grow my career with a Baltimore based company and I am anxious to contribute to their ongoing success and market leadership.”

A graduate of the University of Virginia, Cunningham has held a variety of positions of increasing responsibility including Marketing, Business Development, Operations and Systems Management with organizations the likes of Random House, AT&T Capital Corp. and most recently THINQ Learning Solutions where she held the position of Vice President Marketing and Product Management.
