Williams Scotsman Continues Education Focus in California
Modular Space Key to Supporting Student Education Initiatives

Sacramento, CA and Baltimore, MD – March 1, 2005 – Today at the Coalition for Adequate School Housing (C.A.S.H.) 26th Annual Conference, Williams Scotsman announces continued focus on mobile and modular classroom solutions. Public school administrators are faced with regulatory and legislative imperatives, including the No Child Left Behind initiative and a greater accountability to ensure the highest academic achievement of students. Williams Scotsman enables administrators and educators to dedicate their resources to developing school children, rather than the distractions of education space challenges.

“It’s unfortunate that several companies’ circumstances have created uncertainty in the portable classroom sector. We remain confident in our ability to support the demands of the California education market,” stated Mark Delaney, Regional Vice President of Williams Scotsman’s Central Southwest Division. “We hear from customers every day who tell us our value and time-efficiency are critical to meeting physical infrastructure requirements for their school systems.”

Williams Scotsman’s leadership position has been built through more than fifty years of serving the mobile and modular marketplace. The company’s growth is attributable to an experienced sales and sales management team, a variety of product lines and value-added services for school systems across the state, and a number of successful acquisitions, most recently a large DSA classroom fleet. With one of the largest inventories of new and used portable classrooms and the convenience of piggyback procurement contracts, Williams Scotsman delivers the best in quality education buildings and services. Through acquisitions and organic growth, Williams Scotsman has become a leader in providing mobile and modular classroom space across the state of California, growing its investment in classroom space by 80 percent over the past 12 months alone. Supplementing mobile and portable solutions, the Williams

Scotsman Modular Building Division provides permanent modular classroom and administrative buildings.
